DETAILED ACTION

The IDS received 9/22/2008, the preliminary amendment received 5/11/2005 have been entered.

Election

Applicant's election with traverse of Group II, claims 21, 26-30, in the reply filed on 9/2/2008 is acknowledged. The traversal is on the ground(s) that Groups II and Groups III share the same technical features. This is not found persuasive for the reason of record (see restriction requirement). Applicant's cancellation of claims 1-20, 22-25, 36-39 in the reply filed on 9/2/2008 is also acknowledged.

The requirement is still deemed proper and is therefore made FINAL.

Claims 31-35, 40-44 are non-elected and thus are withdrawn from further consideration. Only claims 21, 26-30 are presented for examination on the merits.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 21, 26-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

The factors to be considered in determining whether undue experimentation is required are summarized in In re Wands 858 F.2d 731, 8 USPQ2d 1400 (Fed. Cir., 1988). The court in Wands states:

“Enablement is not precluded by the necessity for some experimentation such as routine screening. However, experimentation needed to practice the invention must not be undue experimentation. The key word is ‘undue,’ not ‘experimentation.’ Clearly, enablement of a claimed invention cannot be predicted on the basis of quantity of experimentation required to make or use the invention. “Whether undue experimentation is needed is not a single, simple factual determination, but rather is a conclusion reached by weighing many factual considerations”. The factors to be considered in determining whether undue experimentation is required include: (1) the quantity of experimentation necessary, (2) the amount of direction or guidance presented, (3) the presence or absence of working examples, (4) the nature of the invention, (5) the state of the prior art, (6) the relative skill of those in the art, (7) the predictability or unpredictability of the art, and (8) the breadth of the claims.

In the instant case, the specification does not provide any specific guidance on how to detect ozone in activated neutrophils. Since the specification fails to provide sufficient guidance on how to detect ozone in activated neutrophils, it is necessary to have additional guidance to carry out further experimentation to find out how to detect ozone in activated neutrophils. Without more guidance from the specification it would require undue and excessive experimentation for a person having skill in the art to be able to detect ozone in activated neutrophils. The specification provides evidence for ozone production by activated neutrophils (page 84 2nd full paragraph), however due to the unpredictability of the art, Kettle (2005) provides alternative explanations (page 44, 2nd full paragraph) for the evidence presented (by the inventor), and conclude that the species responsible for indigo carmine oxidation could be either ozone or superoxide (page 45, 1st full paragraph). Due to the unpredictability of the art and the breadth of the claims, the invention is highly unpredictable regarding the outcome. Thus, claims 21, 26-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter, which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

When the factors are considered in their entirety, the Wands analysis dictates a finding of undue experimentation and thus, the claims are not enabled.
